

Abstract

A method for rotating a patient to one side in a bed. The method comprises passing an elongated strap around the patient wherein the strap comprises a lower end and an upper end. Attaching the lower end to a bed rail. Grasping the upper end and pulling the upper end toward the bed rail whereby the patient rolls towards the bed rail.